

ASI Press Release

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:
November 6, 2001

Children's Center Activities Build Community On Campus

CONTACT:

Jeff Hoffman
Associate Director for Marketing & Programs
(909) 869-2854

The preschool students at the Cal Poly Pomona Children's Center have been busy making small handprints and footprints all over the University during the month of October. Cooperating with ASI, the Children's Center organized and devoted a day to contribute their artistic expressions of love on the huge cards sent to the Pentagon in Washington D.C. and to the Mayor's office in New York City. The cards now bear little painted hand prints with the matching child's name next to it. Along with the little hands that grace the covers of the cards is written the message, "With love from the Cal Poly Pomona Children's Center."

On Wednesday, October 31st, the children marched around campus for its annual Harvest Day Hat Parade. Staff and University students were greeted by children wearing hats—many of which were hand-made and decorated by the children themselves. The children, along with parents and teachers, made stops at a variety of offices around campus, picking up treats and goodies.

To raise funds for the Children's Center, the children, parents, and staff will be holding a Book Fair from Nov. 5th - 8th. The University Community is invited to support the Center by ordering Scholastic Books. Scholastic Books has a wide range of books for all age groups in sturdy paperback editions at very low prices. These books make great gifts for the holidays. For more information, call the Children's Center at x2284 or stop by the Children's Center Nov. 5th through 8th between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Please support the Children's Center by participating in this Fundraiser. Your participation will contribute to the operation of the Children's Center.

For more information on the Children's Center please call 909.869.2284 or log onto www.asi.csupomona.edu and click on Children's Center.